Dear Professor Castillo,

As Professor of Sociology at the University of Bremen and speaker of the Research Institute on Social Cohesion (RISC), I am delighted to invite you for a research stay in my department for the months of June and July 2024. The topics of your research proposal on "Comparative indicators of social cohesion between Chile and Germany" are certainly linked to the research that my team and I have conducted in the last years. The empirical approach to these issues by using comparative survey data is something that I consider an area of fruitful academic collaboration and where I see possibilities to establish links with my current research as well as with members of my department.

While being here at our Institute you will be able to take part in different academic activities, such as seminars, colloquia and workshops. As you come with your own funding, what we offer to you here is a work place with internet connection as well as access to the library and other facilities at our Institute, including access to the data of the German Social Cohesion Panel (SCP).

I am looking forward to seeing you here in Bremen next year.

With kind regards.

Herrenhausen Conference
“Re-Thinking Social Inequality”

Invitation

Dear Dr Castillo,

The Volkswagen Foundation cordially invites you to participate in the Herrenhausen Conference “Re-Thinking Social Inequality”, which will take place in Hanover, Germany, from May 12 to May 14, 2014.

The global challenge of growing social inequality takes a prominent role in many of the Foundation’s Funding Initiatives; against the backdrop of rapidly changing societies in the world, it currently deserves even more attention than ever before. The conference is specifically dedicated to new research on the topic – including new questions, innovative approaches, and alternative ways of thinking.

The conference language is English. Recipients of the travel grants are required to present their project in a poster session. More information on the poster requirements will be sent out at a later stage. Those applicants who will be invited to contribute a 20 minutes statement in a session intended to present new approaches by young researchers will receive a separate letter.

Please, let us know by March 31, 2014 whether you accept the travel grant and whether you will need a visa for Germany for the duration of the conference. If this is the case, you should take care of the visa requirements yourself as soon as possible. Furthermore, we will provide you with an additional invitation letter addressed to the Embassy to facilitate your application, if you send us the exact address, including telephone and fax number of the German Embassy in your country. We kindly ask you to submit this information jointly with the acceptance in order to guarantee that you will have enough time to apply for a German visa.

Travel expenses (including visa, if necessary), accommodation, meals, and participation in the conference will be covered by the Volkswagen Foundation. Transfers are only reimbursed when using public transport (i.e. no taxi fares). Please, bring along the receipt for your visa costs. You will be reimbursed on presentation of the visa cost receipt in due course.

The flight bookings (economy class only) and your questions regarding your travel to Hanover will be handled by the travel agency “Zecktravel”. Please, get in contact with “Zecktravel”, as the agency will assist you in booking the necessary flights and will also help you with other arrangements as for example insurance issues.

Social cohesion and attitudinal changes toward migration: A longitudinal perspective amid the COVID-19 pandemic

Abstract

The COVID-19 pandemic has impacted social interactions and coexistence around the globe in dimensions that go far beyond health issues. In the case of the Global South, the pandemic has developed along with growing South-South migratory movements, becoming another key factor that might reinforce social conflict in increasingly multicultural areas as migrants have historically served as "scapegoats" for unexpected crises as a way to control and manage diversity. Chile is one of the main destination countries for migrants from the Latin American and Caribbean region, and COVID-19 outbreaks in migrant housing have intensified discrimination. In such a context, there is a need for understanding how the pandemic has potentially changed the way non-migrants perceive and interact with migrant neighbors. Drawing on the national social cohesion panel survey study ELSOC (2016–2021, $N = 2,927$) the aim of this talk is to analyze the changes in non-migrants' attitudes toward migrants—related to dimensions of social cohesion—over the last years and their relation with individual status and territorial factors. We argue that social cohesion in increasingly multicultural societies is partially threatened in times of crisis. The results indicate that after the pandemic, convivial attitudes toward Latin American migrants decreased. Chileans started perceiving them more negatively, particularly those respondents with lower educational levels and who live in increasingly multicultural neighborhoods with higher rates of migrant residents.

Prof. Dr. Juan Carlos Castillo is a Professor at the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Chile and a principal investigator at the Center for Social Conflict and Cohesion Studies in Santiago de Chile.

Roundtable – Global South

Economic, social and political inequalities are pressing issues for countries in the Global North and the Global South alike. At the same time, these inequalities materialize differently across these contexts. For instance, the most unequal societies, in terms of income inequality, can be found in Latin America, the Middle East and North Africa, and Sub-Saharan Africa whereas European countries rank much lower in terms of income inequality. Similarly, political and social inequalities, such as political participation or educational opportunities, but also gender and health inequalities vary significantly across world regions, too. And if we think about climate change and its consequences another layer of inequality becomes visible: while countries in the Global South have contributed little to the problem of climate change these countries feel the brunt of the impact often reinforcing existing inequalities. In contrast, countries in the Global North are mainly responsible for creating the problem in the first place, but the impact of climate change is less pronounced so far and the link to inequality less apparent. This roundtable will therefore discuss the question of inequality research in the Global South from various perspectives. It will deal with questions such as: How far does inequality across countries globally impact on inequality within countries of the Global South? What are the most important topics in inequality research coming from a Global South perspective? How much does this perspective align or contrast with the research agenda of inequality researchers in the Global North? How much does any of this depend on the specific type of inequality under study?

Dear Juan Carlos,

Thank you for attending the 42nd Annual Scientific Meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology (ISPP) in Lisbon, Portugal, July 12 - July 15, 2019 and presenting your paper entitled:

Exposure to information about economic inequality, opportunity beliefs and redistributive preferences: Results of survey experiments

We feel that your presentations furthered the Society's efforts to create a culture of informed discussion and exchange of ideas focused around issues in political psychology. The ISPP Annual Scientific Meeting aims to create a friendly forum to facilitate constructive dialogue between political psychologists, politicians, and intellectuals, regarding the challenges facing our world. Such collaboration can pave the way toward an improved political psychology, one that not only scrutinizes its progress but is also able to demonstrate the relevance of our work beyond the academic borders of our discipline.

We hope to see you again at a future ISPP conference. If you have any questions please do not hesitate to contact us at info@ispp.org.

To Comisión de Evaluación Académica
Facultad de Ciencias Sociales
Universidad de Chile.

Dear Members of the Comisión de Evaluación Académica,

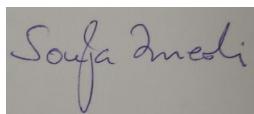

I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Dr. Juan Carlos Castillo, who is applying for promotion to Full Professor at the Universidad de Chile. I have had the pleasure of knowing and collaborating with Dr. Castillo for over ten years, and I can attest to his exceptional contributions to the field of sociology.

Dr. Castillo and I first met at a Political Psychology Conference in Istanbul in 2011, where we both presented papers in the area of political trust research and then decided to start a research collaboration in this field. In 2014, I invited Dr. Castillo to an authors' workshop at the Goethe University Frankfurt (Germany), during which he contributed significantly to an edited handbook on political trust, authoring a chapter on Latin America. Afterwards, I made an academic visit to Chile organized by him in 2015. This collaboration was highly productive and laid the groundwork for our academic partnership. Our joint research further materialized in an article on political trust in Latin America, published in the prestigious journal Social Science Research. This publication has garnered considerable attention and has been highly cited within the academic community.

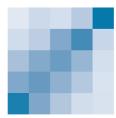

Dr. Castillo's commitment to research excellence, his collaborative spirit, and his dedication to advancing sociological knowledge make him an outstanding candidate for promotion to Full Professor. I am confident that he will continue to make significant contributions to the Universidad de Chile and the broader sociological community.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you require further information.

Dear Members of the Promotion Committee:

I am writing to enthusiastically recommend Dr. Juan Carlos Castillo for promotion to Full Professor at the Universidad de Chile, where he is currently Associate Professor of Sociology. I am lucky to have known Dr. Castillo for over ten years, during which we have exchanged ideas on several important research initiatives.

Dr. Castillo has made major contributions to the field of sociology through his research, teaching, and leadership. In particular, he has been an instrumental figure at the Center of Social Conflict and Cohesion Studies (COES), the organization through which Dr. Castillo has invited me on several occasions to collaborate on research projects and conferences. His ability to foster international collaboration is extremely impressive and reflects his commitment to advancing sociological research around the world. I know that he has also been involved with the University of Konstanz, among other universities in Germany. And I have invited him to collaborate with me at CUNY, where I hope he will be able to visit in the coming year.

Dr. Castillo's specific area of research concerns the timely topic of economic inequality. He has done extensive research on attitudes about economic inequality, for which he is internationally recognized. For instance, I recently invited him to be a co-author of a paper on preferences for reducing economic inequality involving an international team of leading researchers from seven countries. Additionally, Dr. Castillo's work has practical implications for understanding market dynamics and the possibilities for social change and economic justice.

I have also learned about Dr. Castillo's dedication to his students and innovative teaching methods, which, alongside his leadership in the academic community, make him an extremely strong candidate for Full Professor. Indeed, I would say that his promotion is overdue; I have no doubt that it will benefit both the Universidad de Chile and the global academic community more generally.

Please feel free to contact me if you require any further information.

Sincerely,

Dear Members of the Promotion Committee,

my name is Olaf Groh-Samberg, and I am the Principal Investigator of the German "Social Cohesion Panel" Study, Chair of the "Research Data Center" at the "Research Institute Social Cohesion" (RISC), and the Speaker of RISC. In these roles, I have had the privilege of collaborating with Dr. Castillo over the past several years, and I am delighted to write this letter of recommendation for him to support his promotion to Full Professor at the Universidad de Chile.

Dr. Castillo serves as a Principal Investigator at the Center for Social Conflict and Cohesion Studies (COES) in Chile. Our collaboration began several years ago and has included numerous joint initiatives aimed at understanding and promoting social cohesion. In 2022, Dr. Castillo was invited to Bremen as a research fellow at RISC for a month-long research stay. During this period, he actively participated in a conference on social cohesion organized by our institute, demonstrating his expertise and commitment to this critical area of study.

Following his stay in Bremen, we embarked on the design of a comparative study on social cohesion between Chile and Germany. This project has reflected Dr. Castillo's dedication, collaborative spirit, and scholarly acumen. In 2024, Dr. Castillo has been invited to return to Bremen for a two-month research stay, funded by the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), to further advance this comparative study.

The dedication to his research and his innovative approach to studying social cohesion make Prof. Castillo a standout candidate for Full Professor. His ability to build international collaborations and his commitment to academic excellence are truly exceptional. I am confident that his promotion will bring continued success and recognition to the Universidad de Chile.

Sincerely,
